

A CONCEPTUAL FRAMEWORK ON CLIMATE SECURITY AND TOURISM

Ezgi TÜRKMEN⁴⁹³

Pınar YALÇINKAYA⁴⁹⁴

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.31410/EMAN.2018.1022>

Abstract: Climate change and security has been evaluated as a global issue in many disciplines. It was suggested that the climate security term can be used to describe for all security issues related to the impact of climate change. To address this problem it was categorized within the scope of climate security discourses as human, national, international, and ecological security. Global climate change has particularly been identified as social and environmental security threats in tourism. The aim of this study is to evaluate the relationship between climate security and tourism based on climate security discourses. In this context, this research offers a literature review on the place of climate security discourses in tourism. This review shows that all climate security discourses are mentioned without using as climate security term. Economic, health, environment, food, nature, global warming, sustainability, winter tourism, travel mobility, technological developments, tourism diversification and seasonality are highlighted in the literature. All mentioned issues can be classified under the climate security discourses as a result of that tourism has an interdisciplinary approach.

Keywords: climate security, climate change, climate security discourses

Ezgi Türkmen

She completed her undergraduate degree and graduate education at Balıkesir University in the field of Tourism and Hotel Management. She is continuing her PhD education at Balıkesir University. She is a research assistant in the Faculty of Tourism at Çanakkale Onsekiz Mart University. Her research interests include tourism marketing, tourism sociology and new trends in tourism.

Pınar Yalçınkaya

She received her undergraduate degree at Beykent University in the field of Tourism Management. She also received double major bachelor's degree in the field of International Relations. She is graduate student in Tourism Management at Çanakkale Onsekiz Mart University. She is a research assistant in the Faculty of Tourism at Çanakkale Onsekiz Mart University. Her research interests include sustainable tourism, cultural tourism and interdisciplinary issues.

⁴⁹³ Faculty of Tourism, Çanakkale Onsekiz Mart University, Çanakkale, TURKEY

⁴⁹⁴ Faculty of Tourism, Çanakkale Onsekiz Mart University, Çanakkale, TURKEY